

The boy who cried wolf

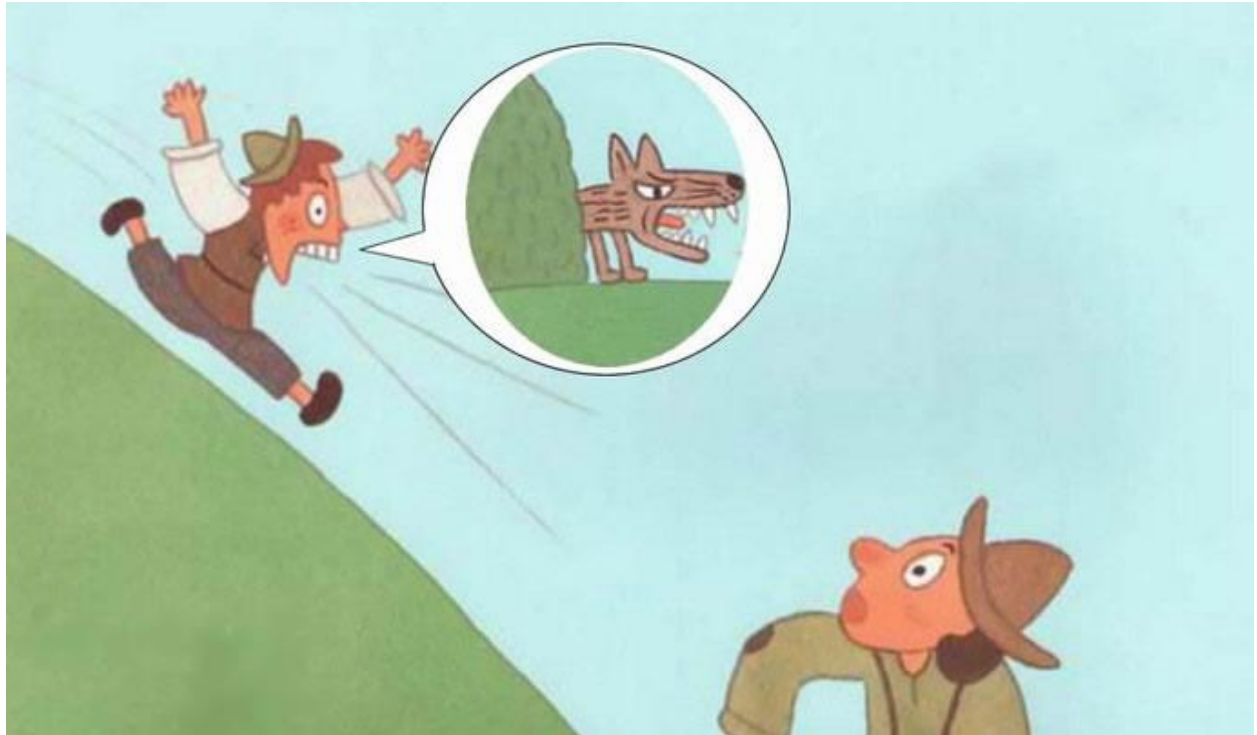

by Aesop

Sheep wander the hills and a boy sits and watches them holding his crook.

But, he becomes bored and decides to play a trick on the villagers.

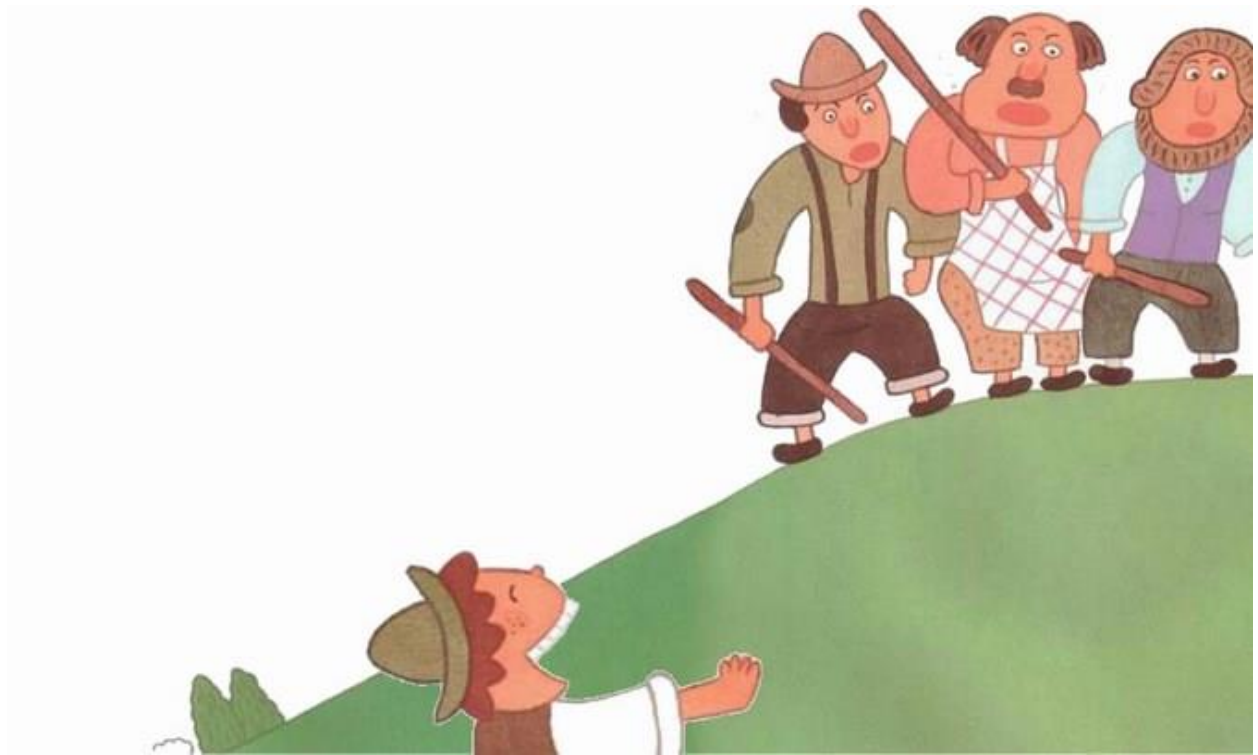

The boy runs into the village yelling "Wolf, wolf, wolf!!!"

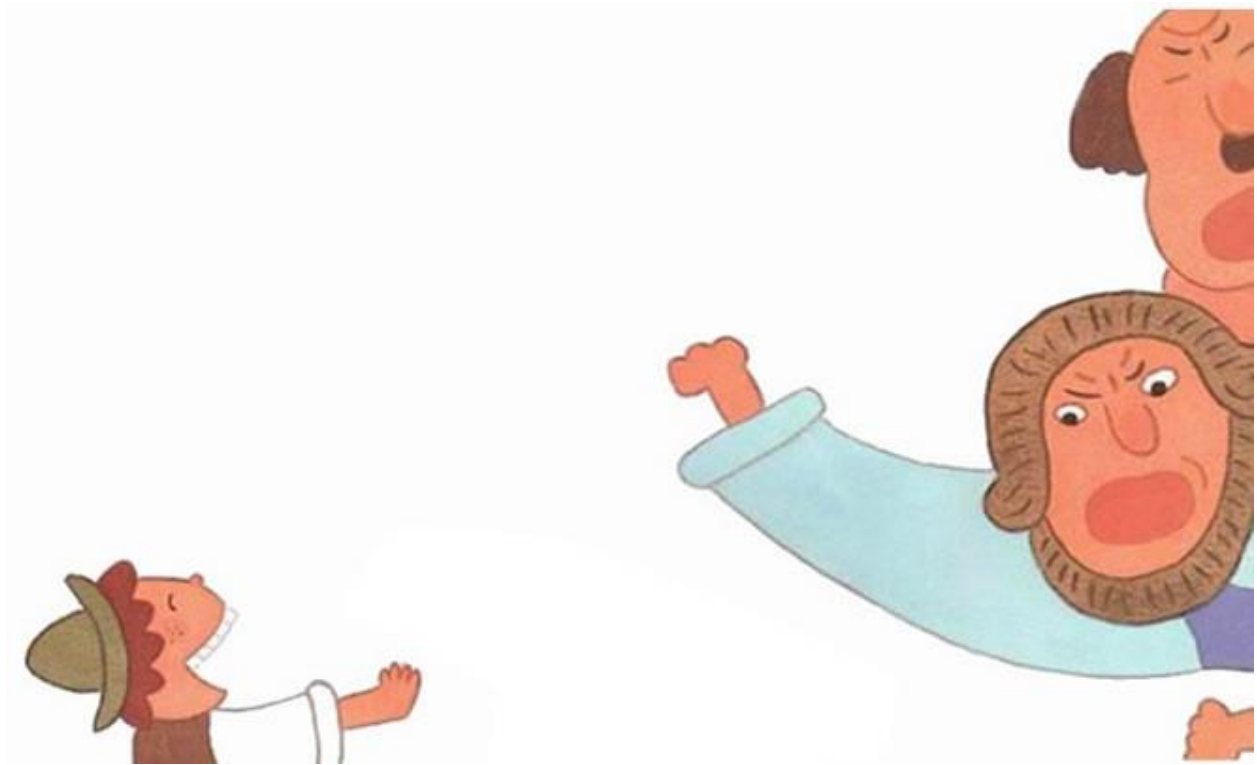

The villagers run to the hill.

They look around but there is no wolf.

The boy begins to laugh. He fooled the villagers.

The villagers become angry.

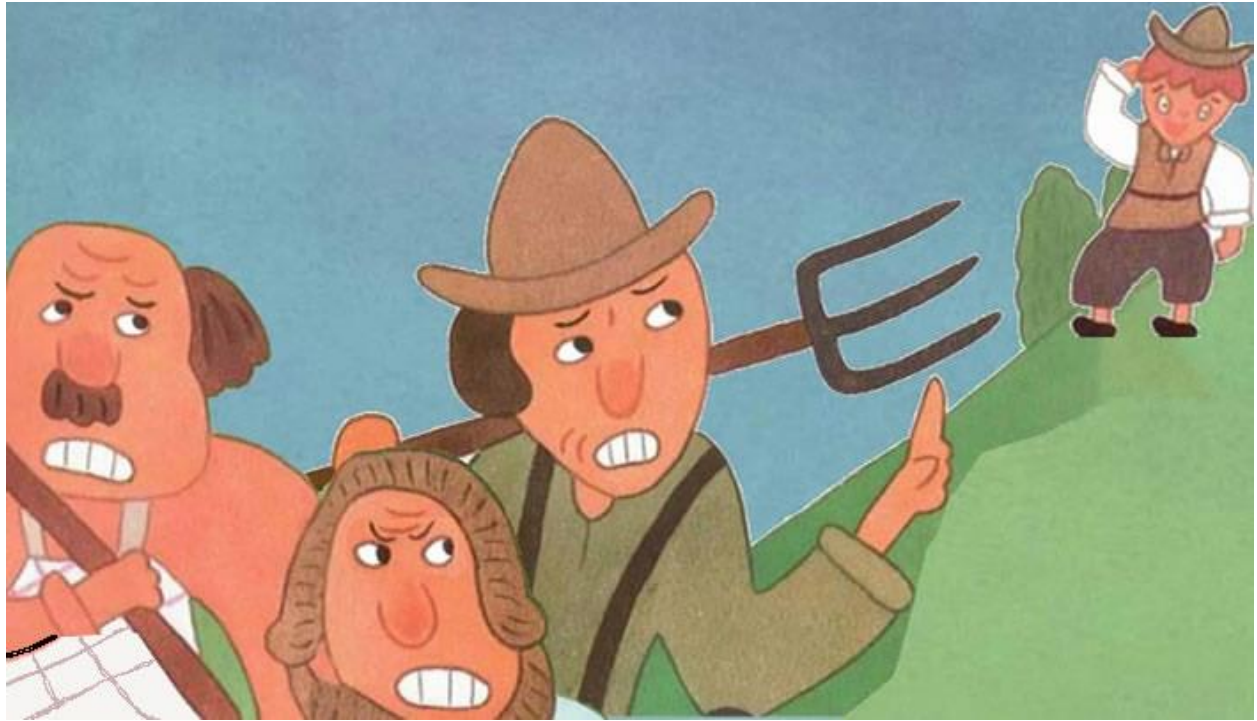

A few days later the boy plays the same trick again.

Again, the villagers run to the hill.

They look around but there is no wolf.

Again, the boy starts laughing. And again the villagers become angry.

The boy just keeps on laughing and laughing.

A few days later the wolf really appears and eats the sheep.

The boy runs to the village yelling "Wolf, wolf, wolf!!!"

The villagers don't believe him.

They say "You won't fool us again."

The boy cried "The wolf killed my sheep."

No one believes a liar.
